JOHN HOUGHTON

- A book for those searching for God and asking questions such as...
How can you measure the unmeasurable?
Can God still have a place in a world ruled by science and technology?
How can there be a God of love when there is so much appalling suffering in the world.
- Established author John Houghton answers these and other questions using the idea of a sea shore journey.

AUTHOR BIO

John Houghton is a layperson's philosopher, theologian and artist with a down-to-earth take on science, faith and spirituality in the 21st Century. John is the author of many books, including both children and adult fantasies, practical faith lifestyle, and home group Bible study. They include Hagbane's Doom and the Oswain Tales series, A Touch of Love and The Harry Potter Effect. He is an experienced public speaker and teacher. John and his wife, Jan live in southern England. They have three adult children and ten grandchildren.

ENDORSEMENTS

'John's helical 'slinky' approach to God and life is very persuasive. His re-telling of the grand biblical narrative is compelling. Throughout, John asks questions galore, refusing to force-feed us. Above all, we are offered the good news in fresh clothes. If you're brave enough to dip your feet in the water for the first time, just do it! If you're already swimming and want to bring those with arm-bands gently with you, this would be a great stimulus.'

Rev Andrew Whitman MA, Theologian and spiritual teacher

'Fresh Footprints is an extraordinary read which takes the reader on a journey from positive beginnings, through the inevitability of tension, failure and struggle, and on to a truly hope-filled conclusion.'
